Comprehension (MCQ) (10 marks)

Read the following personal recount.

My name is Bernard and I am a box turtle. I am an exceptional reptile because, as you probably know, turtles do not write stories. I have decided to become a writer so that people can know a little bit more about us.

I move rather slowly for my age. It has not always been that way though. Why, when I was a hatchling, I could speed across my owner's yard in no time. I admit that there were times when I got stuck on an occasional twig or garden hose, but I was certainly not a quitter. My little legs would just keep going until I overcame any obstacle. As I grew, I learned to slow down and enjoy all the interesting sights and sounds my environment provided. I discovered "bug holes", found the juiciest berries and could tell when my owner was coming to play with me!

When my owner approached, I would stretch out my long neck to reveal my beautiful colouring and proudly walked up to my owner and scratched at his feet. My owner was much taller than me and he usually sat down with me. While my owner was watching, I would make a point to walk around him, crawl under his legs or go for a swim in my pond. He found this behaviour endearing and would proceed to pick me up and tell me how funny I was. This ritual was frequently completed with a special turtle treat of melons or spinach.

Now that I am older, resting has become my favourite pastime. During the warm summer months, I love to dig a hole in the yard and crawl into it. It is quiet and cool in my special place. During the cold winter months, box turtles, like myself, love to hibernate by digging an even deeper hole and staying there until the warmth of the summer sun returns.

I am a very happy box turtle.

Read the following passage carefully.

Once upon a time, there lived an old woman who made the most delicious candies. People would come from all around just to buy her candies at the village market.

One day, while walking to the market to sell her candies, the old lady tripped over a stone and dropped her container on the ground. The container broke and her coconut candies spilled everywhere.

"Oh! Look at this trouble here," she said. "I can't believe what trouble I've got. Now I'll have to go back home!"

Monkey was sitting in a tree above. He saw and heard everything. As the old woman left, he grew curious about her trouble. He scurried down the tree and went to the trouble sprawled across the road.

He tasted one of the coconut candies and exclaimed, "This trouble is most delicious! I shall go buy some more for myself!"

Monkey marched right into town and went to the nearest merchant. "I'd like to buy some trouble," he said.

The merchant looked strangely at Monkey and asked, "Do you know what trouble is?"

"Yes, yes," Monkey said impatiently. "Give me all you have and be quick about it."

The shopkeeper shook his head with a little smile and soon brought out a large bag. Monkey paid for it and left.

As he dragged the bag back to the forest, he began to grow tired. "My, my, but this trouble is heavy and what strange sounds it makes."

He decided to open the bag and enjoy his treat. Licking his lips, he loosened the top of the bag. Suddenly, three fierce dogs burst from the bag, barking and flashing their sharp teeth.

Poor Monkey ran up the nearest tree and sat on a high branch, shaking with fear as the dogs below barked at him. To this day, Monkey stayed high up in the treetops, far away from trouble.
