Section H – Comprehension Open-ended (5 x 2 marks)

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

Mulan decided to disguise herself as a man when she was drafted into the military twelve years ago. Until a few weeks ago, none of her colleagues had a clue that she was a woman.

The Chinese government had introduced National Service in order to fight a war against the Hun nomads living on China's northern border. All families had to give up their men and Mulan's family was no exception.

When Mulan saw her father's name on the draft posters, she decided to go in his place. Her father was old and frail and her only brother who had to take his place was too young. So, she bought a saddle and a horse, put on men's clothes and disguised as her brother. As Mulan was already an accomplished martial artist in the arts of war she successfully joined the army. She was fortunate that many military families at that time trained their daughters for war.

Once in the army, she rose through the ranks swiftly to become a general, making a name for herself as a brilliant military strategist. Twelve years later, the war ended and all the high-ranking officers were brought before the emperor to be honoured and promoted.

The emperor asked Mulan what reward "he" would like and Mulan replied that a swift horse to take her back home was what she desired. The emperor granted the request and she returned to her family home.

Once there, she took off her battle clothes, put on some make-up and let her hair down. When she emerged, her former comrades were stunned and realised that their fearless colleague had been a woman all along.

Word soon got to the emperor who then ordered an inquiry into it. He firmly stated that senior officers who had carelessly allowed this scandal might be sacked.
