Section F: Comprehension MCQ (5 x 1m = 5m)

Read the passage and answer questions 29 to 33.

The glass window pane shattered and Matthew shoved a hand roughly through the opening to lift the latch slowly. He then climbed into the room, landing on his feet with a soft thud. A sudden rush of cold air swept ~~into the room after~~ him. Matthew shivered and he quickly drew the curtains shut. Glancing down, he saw the deep cut on the back of his hand. Lamenting over his rotten luck, he tore off a strip from his tattered coat sleeve and bandaged it. The loud ticking of a clock somewhere in the room gave him a throbbing headache. He wished that it could just stop making such a din. With his heart beating fast, he inched his way forward, hardly able to see anything in front of him.

"Mmmm...," came the muffled sound. Was it just his imagination? Matthew lifted one hand to wipe away the beads of perspiration that were beginning to form on his forehead. Ignoring the thought, he began to move slowly forward again. Then, without any warning, the next thing he knew was that he had kicked something soft. Reaching into his bag, Matthew fumbled around and took out his torch. Switching it on, he found a pair of round eyes staring at him. They belonged to a little girl! She had been gagged and bound so tightly that movement was strictly out of the question. As he was about to turn away, her tear-streaked face restrained him. Feeling sorry for the girl, Matthew used his pocket knife to cut her loose.

15

20

The girl started to cry as she had ~~believed Matthew to be the~~ rescuer who was there to end her ordeal. She clung onto Matthew tightly. This confused Matthew further. What was he to do? After a few moments, Matthew spoke in a gentle voice.

"What happened, little girl?" asked Matthew.

25

From her mumbled reply, Matthew could only make out that the girl had been there for two days without food and water. It seemed that her captors had totally neglected her. Almost immediately, Matthew shone his torch around the room. Noticing a switch at one end of the room, he strode over and flicked it on. Light flooded the room and Matthew then carried the little girl back to the window from which he had entered. As he climbed out with his charge, Matthew smiled wryly and muttered under his breath, "I can't believe what I've just done. Neither will the police."

30

71

- (2) He spoke to the girl gently and helped her escape.
- (3) He climbed in through the window to save the girl.

"Lion! Lion! Lion!"

All three of us leapt to our feet, and the next moment, Mdisho came tearing round the corner of the house yelling at us, "Come quick! Come quick! A huge lion is eating the wife of the cook!"

That sounds quite funny when you put it in writing back here in England, but to us, standing on a veranda in the middle of East Africa, it was not funny at all.

Robert Sanford dashed into the house and came out again in five seconds flat holding a rifle.

"Get the children indoors!" he shouted to his wife as he ran down off the veranda with me behind him.

Mdisho pointed towards the back of the house and yelled, "The lion has taken the wife of the cook and the cook is chasing the lion and trying to save his wife!"

We very quickly spotted the massive sandy-coloured lion not more than eighty metres off and trotting away from the house, heading for the jungle with the cook's wife held between his jaws. The cook was running most bravely and waving his arms, screaming and shouting, "Let go of my wife! Let go of my wife!"

Robert Sanford was running after the cook who was running after the lion and I ran after Robert Sanford. He was holding his rifle in both hands and shouting to the cook, "Pingo! Pingo! Get out of my way! Pingo! Lie down on the ground!" But the cook ignored him and kept on running.

It was an awkward situation because there was no way Robert Sanford could take a shot at the lion.

The lion was nearing the jungle and we all knew that once he got in there, we would never be able to get him. Then Robert Sanford stopped and raised his rifle and took aim. There was a loud crack as the big gun went off and I saw a spurt of dust ahead of the lion. The lion stopped dead and turned his head, still holding the woman in his jaws. He saw the arm-waving cook and he saw Robert Sanford and he saw me and he had certainly heard the rifle shot and seen the spurt of dust. He dropped the cook's wife on to the ground and broke for cover. With great leaping bounding strides, he disappeared among the jungle trees.

(Adapted from Going Solo by Roald Dahl)

80. Why was it risky for Robert Sanford to take a shot at the lion?

82. Why was there a spurt of dust ahead of the lion?

83. According to the writer, the lion "broke for cover" (Line 37).
