Zebras are animals that look like horses. They walk, trot and gallop like horses but do not move as quickly. Zebras look for plants to eat. Such plants are grass and roots.

Zebras are special as they sleep standing up. They make noises by barking, snorting or whining. A zebra's ears tell others if it is feeling calm or frightened. If its ears are standing straight up, it is feeling calm. When the zebra's ears are pushed forward, it is feeling frightened.

Large cats like lions and hyenas hunt for zebras. When being attacked, the zebras will form a circle with all their members facing out. They will then kick and bite the animals which attack them.
