Raising a teenager is like caring for a plant. Plants need occasional watering but the (21) good and advantageous effects of water are lost when too much water is poured on them.

Most parents have the (22) natural inclination to protect their children from harm. This may explain a parent's protective actions even when his children become teenagers. By over protecting their teenagers, parents are actually hindering their growth. Teenagers with overprotective parents tend to (23) depend too much on their parents. They lack the confidence to make their own decisions and the perseverance to carry through when facing (24) obstacles. This would make the (25) progression in life stages from teenager to adulthood a stressful process for both the child and the parents.

Section F- Comprehension MCQ (5 x 1 mark)

Read the given passage below and answer questions 26 to 30.

Shaped like a goblet and filled with murky fluid, the pitcher plant looks very inviting to passing insects. It glistens attractively in the sunlight, but as Shakespeare once wrote, 'All that glitters is not gold.'. The pitcher plant is a death trap. After entering the plant, the unwary insect will struggle but will not succeed in escaping from its sticky clutches; soon it will slip down into the fluid-filled chamber and drown. Even hard-shelled insects such as cockroaches are easily digested. Pitcher plants depend on insects for the nutrients needed to keep them alive.

It is now an offence in Singapore to own, sell or display to the public any of the island's five species of pitcher plants. Jail terms and fines of up to $10 000 await those who break the law.

Many of you, no doubt, travel quite frequently to Malaysia, where the variety of pitcher plants is staggering. Locals there refer to them as periuk kera, or translated as 'the monkey's cooking pot'. There are at least 70 species growing in the wild. As the number of tourists to Malaysia's nature reserves increases, so does the threat to the continued existence of these exquisite plants. Like Singapore, the Malaysian government also prohibits the import and export of all types of pitcher plants. It would be very foolish indeed to try to bring any home as souvenirs.

A good place to go and take photographs or make sketches of these wonderful plants is MacRitchie Reservoir Park. If you walk over the wooden bridge near the tea-house, you will soon see swathes of pitcher plants along the edge of the water and patches of them scattered alongside the jogging trail as far as the old Chinese grave. Admire them. Peer into their chambers of death, but please do not touch them. The pitcher plant, like all beautiful things, is extremely fragile.

For each question from 26 to 30, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Choose the correct answer and shade the corresponding oval on the Optical Answer Sheet (OAS) provided.

26. The second part of sentence 1 in paragraph 1 tells the reader _____
- (1) how the pitcher plant got its name
 - (2) how deadly the fluid in the pitcher plant is
 - (3) the danger the pitcher plant poses insects
 - (4) the pitcher plant appears attractive to insects
27. In what way does the pitcher plant prove the truth of Shakespeare's words?
- (1) The pitcher plant shines brightly in the sunlight.
 - (2) To pitcher plants, insects are precious like gold.
 - (3) Insects are tricked by the seemingly inviting pitcher plant.
 - (4) Insects will lose the golden opportunity to escape once they enter the pitcher plant.
28. In line 10, "those" refer to the _____
- (1) members of the public
 - (2) people who are jailed or fined
 - (3) people who go against the law
 - (4) frequent travellers to Malaysia
29. The word 'staggering' in line 12 probably means _____
- (1) varying
 - (2) surprising
 - (3) interesting
 - (4) fascinating
30. Based on the text, which one of the following statements is TRUE?
- (1) Pitcher plants are deadly to insects, yet these plants can die easily.
 - (2) Pitcher plants are found aplenty along coastal waters of Singapore.
 - (3) It is not allowed to take pitcher plants out of Malaysia but bringing them into the country is not an offence.
 - (4) Fortunately, tourism has not really affected the existence of pitcher plants in the nature reserves of Malaysia.

Section K - Comprehension Open-ended (10 x 2marks)

Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow.

"Last bus to La Paz!" shouted the minibus driver's wife. The sun was setting as we clambered into the minibus. I smiled at Mother. Having taught English in the city of Trujillo, Peru, for four months, I was elated when Mother visited me. We decided to venture into Bolivia, a country east of Peru.

It was going to be a three-hour ride and soon it was dark. The only other passenger in the bus was a middle-aged bearded man who was nursing a bad cold. Along the way, I noticed people who were waiting on the side of the road for a bus. I thought it was strange that we did not stop. Since when does a minibus driver in South America miss an opportunity to pick up more passengers? We bumped along in the darkness for hours. The driver spent much of the journey talking on his mobile, but I could not hear the conversations.

We were getting close to La Paz when the minibus suddenly slowed and turned off the main road. Mother looked at me sharply, but I reassured her. During my travels, I was used to seeing minibus drivers detour to pick up family members or undertake repairs to the bus. However, I felt a creeping fear almost immediately after our minibus turned into a much narrower track. I could see a red car driving ahead of us. We nearly hit it when its driver slammed on the brakes suddenly. The doors of the red car burst open. Four armed bandits, with their faces covered, charged into the minibus brandishing guns. I was dragged on to the floorboard and a hand clamped over my mouth.

"Don't make any noise!" voices shouted in Spanish. I felt a pistol pressed against my temple. Someone taped my wrists while another tied a blindfold over my eyes. Although I could not see my mother, I could hear her heavy and rapid breathing. As my mind scrambled in a million directions, these thoughts puzzled me: Why had the bus driver not done anything? Why had his wife not screamed? Then I recognised the congested breathing close to me - the bearded man in the minibus was one of those holding me down! It all began to make sense to me. Amid the confusion and shouting, I offered them money.

Without a word, someone taped my mouth shut and the engine started. I had no clue how far we travelled. We were taken to a house and were searched by two men. They took the small bag I was wearing and the money belt in my jeans. I was yanked up into a sitting position and I felt the gun at my head again. A hand ripped the tape away from my mouth and lifted my blindfold. They removed my debit card from my pouch and waved it at me frantically.

"PIN number, PIN number!" the voice demanded. Next, they moved on to Mother who gave her numbers shakily. I translated her numbers into Spanish and prayed hard that mine had been correct. We heard the minibus engine start and drive off. When the men returned hours later, I heard them counting cash.

Since we were blindfolded, sounds took on a new importance and what I heard terrified me. Something was being constructed from cardboard and masking tape. Were they making a coffin or something to deaden the sound of a gunshot? After some time, two men came into our room and pulled us to our feet. I pleaded with them to release us but they just shouted at me to get moving. I could hear Mother crying. My heart sank. It was hopeless. This was it – the end was coming.
