Carefully read the text below, consisting of 12 lines, about the different learning abilities of students. The first and last lines for each paragraph are correct. For eight of the lines, there is one grammatical error in each line. There are two lines with no errors.

If there is NO error in a line, put a tick (✓) in the space provided.

If the line is incorrect, circle the incorrect word and write the correct word in the space provided.

The correct word you provide must not change the original meaning of the sentence.

Examples:

In education, it has become critically important to take into account the different learning abilities and interests in students. 1.
Universities here now admit students not purely base on their 2.
academic results but also on their aptitude. This is a approach 3.
that look at the complete person, including his interests, 4.
experiences, strengths and weaknesses, and not just his 5.
academic grades. In the study done by Minister Ong Ye Kung, 6.
that approach works better. Polytechnic students admitted 7.
by aptitude testing performed significantly better than 8.
students who got in through the traditional way. This is not 9.
surprising because these students had shown great interest 10.
and commitment in their chosen field of study.

Text 2

The text below is about the tiger hunt planned by the main character, Mrs Packletide. Read it carefully and answer Questions 5 – 16 in the Question Booklet.

- 1 It was Mrs. Packletide's pleasure and intention that she should shoot a tiger. The compelling motive for her sudden deviation was the fact that Loona Bimberton had recently been carried eleven miles for a hunting trip in an aeroplane by an Algerian aviator, and Loona Bimberton talked of nothing else: only a personally procured tiger-skin and a heavy harvest of photographs. Mrs. Packletide had already arranged in her mind the lunch she would give at her house in Curzon Street, ostensibly in Loona Bimberton's honour, with a tiger-skin rug occupying most of the foreground and all of the conversation. She had also already designed in her mind the tiger-claw brooch that she was going to give Loona Bimberton on her next birthday. It seems that her movements and motives were largely governed by her dislike for Loona Bimberton. 5 10
- 2 Mrs. Packletide had offered a thousand rupees for the opportunity of shooting a tiger without much risk or exertion. It so happened that a neighbouring village could boast of being the favoured rendezvous of an animal of respectable antecedents, which had been driven by the increasing infirmities of age to abandon game-killing and confine its appetite to the smaller domestic animals. The prospect of earning the thousand rupees had stimulated the commercial instinct of the villagers: children were posted night and day on the outskirts of the local jungle to head the tiger back in the unlikely event of his attempting to roam away to fresh hunting-grounds, and the cheaper kinds of goats were left about with elaborate carelessness to keep him satisfied with his present quarters. The one great anxiety was lest he should die of old age before the date appointed for the memsahib's shoot. Mothers carrying their babies home through the jungle after the day's work in the fields hushed their singing lest they might curtail the restful sleep of the herd-robber. 15 20 25
- 3 The great night duly arrived, moonlit and cloudless. A platform had been constructed in a comfortable and conveniently placed tree, and thereon crouched Mrs. Packletide and her paid companion, Miss Mebbin. A goat, gifted with a particularly persistent bleat, such as even a partially deaf tiger might be reasonably expected to hear on a still night, was tethered at the correct distance. With an accurately sighted rifle and a thumb-nail pack of patience cards, the sportswoman awaited the coming of the quarry. 30

"I suppose we are in some danger?" said Miss Mebbin.

She was not actually nervous about the wild beast, but she had a morbid dread of performing an atom more service than she had been paid for. 35

"Nonsense," said Mrs. Packletide; "it's a very old tiger. It couldn't spring up here even if it wanted to."

"If it's an old tiger, I think you ought to get it cheaper. A thousand rupees is a lot of money."

- 4 The conversation was cut short by the appearance of the animal itself. As soon as it caught sight of the tethered goat, it lay flat on the earth, for the purpose of snatching a short rest before commencing the grand attack. 40

"I believe it's ill," said Louisa Mebbin, loudly in Hindustani, for the benefit of the village headman, who was in ambush in a neighbouring tree.

"Hush!" said Mrs. Packletide, and at that moment the tiger commenced ambling towards his victim. 45

"Now, now!" urged Miss Mebbin with some excitement; "if he doesn't touch the goat we needn't pay for it."

- 5 The rifle flashed out with a loud report, and the great tawny beast sprang to one side and then rolled over in the stillness of death. In a moment, a crowd of excited natives had swarmed on to the scene, and their shouting speedily carried the glad news to the village. And their triumph and rejoicing found a ready echo in the heart of Mrs. Packletide; already that luncheon-party in Curzon Street seemed immeasurably nearer. 50

- 6 It was Louisa Mebbin who drew attention to the fact that the goat was in death-throes from a mortal bullet-wound, while no trace of the rifle's deadly work could be found on the tiger. Evidently the wrong animal had been hit, and the beast of prey had succumbed to heart-failure, caused by the sudden report of the rifle, accelerated by senile decay. Mrs. Packletide was pardonably annoyed at the discovery; but, at any rate, she was the possessor of a dead tiger, and the villagers, anxious for their thousand rupees, gladly connived at the fiction that she had shot the beast. And Miss Mebbin was a paid companion. Therefore did Mrs. Packletide face the cameras with a light heart, and her pictured fame reached from the pages of the Texas Weekly Snapshot to the illustrated Monday supplement of the Novoe Vremya. As for Loona Bimberton, she refused to look at the illustrated paper for weeks, and her letter of thanks for the gift of a tiger-claw brooch was a model of repressed emotions. The luncheon-party she declined. 60 65

- 7 "How amused everyone would be if they knew what really happened," said Louisa Mebbin a few days after the party.

"What do you mean?" asked Mrs. Packletide quickly. 70

"How you shot the goat and frightened the tiger to death," said Miss Mebbin, with her disagreeably pleasant laugh.

"No one would believe it," said Mrs. Packletide, her face changing colour as rapidly.

"Loona Bimberton would," said Miss Mebbin. 75

"You surely wouldn't give me away?" she asked.

"I've seen a weekend cottage near Darking that I should rather like to buy," said Miss Mebbin with seeming irrelevance. "Six hundred and eighty, freehold. Quite a bargain, only I don't happen to have the money."

Text 3

The text below is about the Rohingya refugees who were forced to leave their homeland. Read it carefully and answer Questions 17 – 22.

- 1 The plight of Myanmar's Rohingyas refugees is desperately bleak as they are rendered stateless in their homeland and detained in transit nations, a rights group says. The Rohingyas are a Muslim ethnic minority group living in Myanmar's western Rakhine State, bordering Bangladesh on the Bay of Bengal. Myanmar, also known as Burma, views its population of around 1.1 million Rohingyas as illegal Bangladeshi immigrants and denies them citizenship. They face a slew of restrictions that have led the United Nations to consider them one of the world's most persecuted people. 5

- 2 Myanmar's 2010 transition from a military-led government to a somewhat more democratic system led to some of the worst violence against Muslims. The national government has tacitly permitted the rise of the 969 movement, a group of Buddhist monks who employ "moral justification for a wave of anti-Muslim bloodshed," Reuters reported. Since 2012, roughly 140,000 Rohingyas have fled northwestern Myanmar amid deadly fighting with the majority Buddhists. "The Burmese authorities, particularly the military, have a clear policy to push them out from Burma using persecution in almost every form possible," Sunai Phasuk, HRW's (Human Rights Watch) senior Thailand researcher, told the ABC. 10

- 3 The modern Burmese state is built upon the concept of Buddhist Burmese supremacy; this concept has been used by the military as a pretext for their rule and on the other hand to create a bogeyman or demonise the Rohingyas as bogeymen for the country's ills such as poverty, and lack of social services. Everything is being blamed on the Rohingyas. They are not allowed to register their marriages, they are not allowed to have an education and, worst of all, the Burmese authorities have encouraged communal violence against the Rohingya Muslims. 20 25

- 4 Mr Phasuk said the survivors of communal unrest are forced to live in "ghetto-like facilities" and are unable to return to their homes that were seized by their Buddhist neighbours. "HRW research in 2013 concluded that the atrocities committed against Rohingya Muslims in Rakhine state is a crime against humanity and bordering on ethnic cleansing," he said. "This is a very serious situation and it explains why the Rohingyas cannot live in their homeland and have to take a ferry, a dangerous risk, at the hands of human traffickers and embark on this maritime exodus heading for a better life, a new life in another country." 30

- 5 A Thai foreign ministry statement said officials also agreed not to "push back migrants stranded in Thai waters". The United Nation's refugee agency, the UNHCR, has informed Thailand that at least 2,000 migrants may be stranded on boats off the Myanmar-Bangladesh coasts, held in horrific conditions for weeks by traffickers who are demanding that passengers pay to be released. But Mr Phasuk said the future for Rohingya asylum seekers remains uncertain once they finally reach Thailand. "The Thai authorities see the Rohingyas as illegal immigrants who will be arrested and detained indefinitely in cramped cells in the 35 immigration detention centre," he said. If the Rohingyas are arrested by Thai authorities, they have nowhere to go; nowhere to be sent to.

- 6 So why doesn't the Myanmar government do anything about the Rohingya problem? Put simply, positioning oneself against the Buddhist majority is considered a risky political move. Myanmar President Thein Sein's office previously issued a statement referring to the rabidly anti-Rohingya 969 movement as "just a symbol of peace." Even politician Aung San Suu Kyi, the Nobel Laureate who fought for decades for democracy and reform in Myanmar, has been conspicuously quiet on the issue. 45 50
