Section C: Comprehension (5 marks)

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

Mrs Frisby continued to walk along the pathway of the barn. She saw a wire fence that marked the other end of the pasture and decided to walk towards it. As she approached it, she was suddenly startled by an outburst. The first thing that came to her mind was that a hen had strayed from the chicken coop. It sounded as if a fox had caught a wandering hen.

5

She looked around her but did not see any hen. Instead, she saw a young crow. He was flapping in the grass, behaving in an odd manner. She watched him flutter to the top of the fence where he continued to perch nervously. At that moment, he spread his wings to flap hard and took off. However, after flying for about five feet, he stopped and crashed to the ground. Shedding a flurry of black feathers, he squawked loudly and uncomfortably.

10

Then, Mrs Frisby realised that the crow was tied to the fence. She saw something silver tangled around one of his legs. The other end of it was caught in the fence. Walking closer, she realised that it was a silver string, similar to what people used to decorate and wrap their presents.

15

The crow pecked persistently at the silver string with his beak and cawed softly to himself. It was a miserable sound and Mrs Frisby could hardly stand it. She made up her mind that she would try to help him.

As he continued to switch between trying to fly again and pecking at the string, Mrs Frisby told him to wait and let her try. Helpless and desperate, the crow relented. It seemed like Mrs Frisby was the only hope he had to escape before the cat returned. He was not about to perish yet.

The beggar walked sadly in the streets of the town. Shivering in his thin coat, he passed through the crowd while rosy-faced Christmas shoppers quickened their steps and avoided him.

The sound of music made him stop at a toyshop. He looked into the window and watched a saleslady open a box. She took out two toy mice, a father mouse and his son. When she wound the key in the back of the father mouse, he danced in a circle with his son. The beggar was mesmerized by the sight but he knew that he could never afford to buy them.

Before long, it was time to close the store and everyone went home. As the clock struck midnight, all the toys came to life. The toys warmly welcomed their new mice friends. The mouse son became frightened watching so much happening around him and could not help but begin to cry. The toys warned them that they should never talk or cry in the presence of people. If they did, unfortunate things could happen.

The next day, the mouse and his son were sold. Their new owners loved them, often winding them up to watch them dance. Each night, when the owners were asleep, they talked to the other toys, making sure they were never seen by their owners.

One day, the mouse son started to miss the toys at the store and began to cry unintentionally. No one noticed his tears but the family cat did. She pounced on the mouse son and knocked him onto the floor. He fell with a crash and was smashed.

The next morning, the beggar saw a familiar sight when he looked into the dustbin. It was the mouse and his son! His heart ached to see the once beautiful toys in this state and decided to fix them.

Finally, he fixed them. As he wound them up, they started to dance again. Looking at them, he motivated himself never to give up. The beggar smiled and put the toys in his pocket, not noticing the smiles on the toys too.
